U.S. CRUDE OIL & NATURAL GAS PRODUCTION, 2008

WHO IS YOUR BENEFICIARY?

A slightly frightened look left the woman's eyes, and tears started to flow as her whole expression changed to hopelessness. To cover her emotion she turned down to buy her fare to the young child's bed.

Now for the first time, she had the facts her husband had passed on without providing for her as a beneficiary of his life insurance. Through business or negligence, he had never made a change of beneficiary from that of his mother-in-law when he married, and not when the child was born.

Expressions of sympathy cannot very help in the widow as she left the shipyard office. What could she do now to provide for herself and child? Not even the insurance company could rightfully distribute the benefits to any person other than those designated by the deceased.

We may have elaborated a bit to get the point across, but three similar cases took place with two ship families last year.

One employee died leaving his wife as beneficiary. Our investigation found that she had died fourteen years earlier.

Another employee died and left his sister as beneficiary. Two days later his wife appeared, and had to be told that she was not the beneficiary and would not receive his insurance money.

And a third unfortunate case, like our illustration above, developed when a wife and baby were left no insurance benefits—because the employee forgot to alter his beneficiary when he got married. His mother received the whole sum.

Who is your beneficiary? Have your status or circumstances changed? Is your beneficiary living? Did you get married?

There are countless ways to die, and death (like taxes) is inevitable. None of us knows just how much time—years or minutes we have left. We get through the Fourth of July week-end with no traffic deaths in Delaware County, but the grim reaper doesn't need a holiday or highway congestion.

Are the proceeds of your life insurance going to benefit the person(s) of your choice?

You can be sure your insurance benefits will go to the right party by going to the Personal Office in the yard or Mr. William Smith's secretary in the Midwell Plant office.

TRAVELING TIME
By George F. Boyles

Traveling is a very interesting activity. It allows you to see new places, meet new people, and experience different cultures. Whether you are traveling for business or pleasure, it can be a great way to spend your time. There are many different ways to travel, and each has its own advantages and disadvantages. For example, traveling by plane is fast and convenient, but it can be expensive. Traveling by train is slower, but it is often more comfortable and scenic. Traveling by car gives you the most flexibility, but it can be tiring and expensive. No matter how you choose to travel, it is important to plan ahead and be prepared for anything that might happen. Traveling can be a wonderful experience, and it is one that everyone should try at least once in their lifetime.

OUR GIRLS

By Elizabeth

Little girls are the sweet things that happen to people. They are born with a little bit of superstition about them and though it wears thin sometimes, there is always enough left to leave your heart-eyes when they are sitting in the seat, or crying from personal pain, or peering up the street in mother's best clothes.

A little girl can be sweeter (and luckier) almost than anyone else in the world. She can jitter around, and stamp, and make funny noises that breakle your nerves, yet just when you open your mouth, she stands there demure with that special look in her eyes. A girl is innocence playing in the mud, beauty standing on its head, and Mother's hand dragging a doll by the hair.

Girls are available in five colors—black, white, red, yellow or brown—yet Mother Nature always manages to select your favorite color when you place your order. They dispense the law of supply and demand—there are millions of little girls, but each is as precious as rubies. God borrows from many creatures to make a little girl. He uses the song of a bird, the squeal of a pig, the stubbornness of a mule, the nature of a monkey, squeens of a grasshopper, the vanity of a cat, the speed of a gazelle, the dyes of a fox, the softness of a kitten, and to top it, all off, He adds the mysterious mind of a woman.

A little girl likes new shoes, party dresses, small animals, first grade, comic books, the girl next door, dolls, make-believe, dancing lessons, ice cream, kite-flew, coloring/books, makeup, cans of water, going visiting, tea parties, and one boy. She doesn't care so much for vitamins, boys in general, large dogs, hand-me-downs, straight chairs, vegetables, movie seats, or staying in the front yard. She is the luckiest when you are thinking, the prettiest when she has provoked you, the loudest at bedtime, the spiciest when you want to shut her off, and the most flirtatious when she absolutely must not get the best of you again.

Who else can cause you more grief, joy, irritation, satisfaction, embarrassment and genuine delight than this combination of Eve, Salome and Florence Nightingale? She can mess up your house, your hair and your dignity — spend your money, your time and your temper — then just when your patience is ready to crack, her cunning peeks through and you're hot again.

Yes, she is a nerve-wracking nuisance, just a noisy bundle of mischief. But when your dreams tumble down and the world is a mess — when it seems you are pretty much of a fool after all — she makes you a king when she climbs on your knee and whispers, "That's you best of all!"
